

Learning Plan 1: Scoring Guide

Web Trends Report

Through your discussion and research you have identified several potential new and emerging web trends and technologies. These could be related to standards, specifications, software, design, delivery, etc. any area that relates to the web development field.

You will use that research and discussion to construct a Web Trends Report meeting the criteria listed on the Scoring Guide below.

This report will be created as a web page/site that can be incorporated into your final project for this course.

You will need to demonstrate at least one of the trends that you identified in your page/site. This will require you to demonstrate a very important core ability in the web development field and that is to Learn Effectively.

The key indicator of this core ability that we are using is to show initiative and resourcefulness by selecting a web trend that you may have little experience in and learning how to use that trend through researching and self-teaching the skills involved in that trend.

The web development field is a new and emerging field where technologies and trends change rapidly and will require you to develop a certain level of self-reliance! Part of this assessment is to measure your ability to do so.
